

This class UML shows the initial data handling operations of signal project. DataListener is responsible for the initial gathering of information from monitoring sources. This raw data gets passed to the DataParser which is responsible for reformatting the raw data into more structured and usable format. Finally, the parsed data is passed to the DataSourceAdapter class which is responsible for storing the data using the data management classes, and also responsible for passing this data directly to the Alert classes for initial evaluations.